FUND - COMMENTARY

AAAP BHA was positive. Equity and credit trading generated the bulk of gains in with additional, smaller gains from inflation, FX, commodity and digital assets, while rates trading detracted modestly. Within rates, losses stemmed from directional and curve trading in the US, together with volatility positions. Equity gains stemmed from volatility and quant strategies, while credit gains were spread across mortgages, EM sovereigns and DM corporates. Commodity gains came from long gold positioning, while FX gains came from trading in Asia. The digital asset gains came from non-directional relative value trading. In markets, the combination of at/above US GDP, positive earnings growth, and a Fed on pause has resulted in bullish markets moves. Following the FOMC press conference price action was an everything rally; however, thematics at the regional, sector, and factor level continues to drive markets across: AI, GLP-1, Onshoring, Defence, Power, Buybacks, Momentum, Japan, India, and China. At the macro level, the US FOMC Fed with dots pointed towards the market priced 3 cuts by year-end. The big takeaway from Chairman Powell's remarks was that the Fed's view of the last two months of inflation prints, which had come in on the higher side, were "just a bump in the road". Rates volatility has fallen back to levels last seen in Feb-22, post the dovish Fed comments, suggesting relative calmness and consensus that the Fed will cut rates leading to demand in UST. Elsewhere EU inflation slowed with HICP in France and Italy both considerably lower than expected, SNB cut rates by 25bps, and the BoJ increase rates for the first time in nearly 20 years to +0.1%.
